Cornwall Manor Retirement Community was founded in 1949 by a group of United Methodist Clergy and Laymen from the Philadelphia Conference of The United Methodist Church (now the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference) as a home for retired United Methodist clergy and their families.

Cornwall Manor's many historic buildings include the Buckingham Mansion, built circa 1773 and which has been renovated to include seven residential apartments, a reading room and a music room; a former Carriage House, which now serves as a residential building and fitness center; and a former Paymaster's Building, which is now a resident art studio and meeting area. The combination of these, along with a state-of-the-art Wellness Center and swimming pool, and houses and apartment buildings of varying styles, truly result in a campus look and feel.

This mansion was comprised of over 100 hours of detailed construction. The mansion is completely edible, and no Styrofoam or card board used in its assemble.

The gingerbread bread is covered in fondant, royal icing and white chocolate. The most unique characteristic feature of the mansion is its 3 ½ story offset tower adorned with numerous windows and balconies. More than 3,282 shingles were used in the roof and the red fondant welcome mat and broom finish off the structure.

Sports Therapy Sciences Hosts Alumni Day

On December 18th, over a dozen Sports Therapy class alumni joined the Class of 2018 to give their insight and tips on the transition from high school to post-secondary education and work life. Every graduating class from the inception of the program in 2013 was represented. The alumni came from a variety of universities and colleges, such as, Penn State University, Penn College, Central Penn College, Alvernia University, Slippery Rock University and West Virginia University. Some students have finished their education and are now pursuing careers in the fitness industry. Hanna Seyfert, Sports Therapy Instructor, said of the event, "It was exciting for me to see what career and educational paths each of the students ultimately decided to take. Many chose to pursue exercise science, athletic training, physical therapy and personal training. It solidified that we are on the right path in what we are teaching."

Not only did the students get to network and ask questions of the alumni, but a couple students came and taught lessons in the lab. Shyann Wallace, Class of 2016 (Cedar Crest) and West Virginia University athletic training student, demonstrated a lower extremity neurological examination. Ben Kutz, Class of 2016 (Lebanon) and Slippery Rock University exercise science and pre-physical therapy student, taught the class lifting and external cuing techniques. Current student, Keishla Garcia (Cedar Crest High School) stated, "I think it was awesome to see that they came right out of this class and are taking their education to a further level. You can definitely tell that they have a passion for what they are learning."

Mrs. Seyfert stated that she plans to make Alumni Day an annual event. She believes that keeping a connection between our past and future will only strengthen the Sports Therapy Sciences program and create opportunities for both the current and future alumni.
