Alumni Update

Culinary Students make the most of their Mountain Adventures

Several culinary students from the past two school years (2022 and 2023) are learning to adapt to high altitudes! William Bucks (PA), Gianna Hernandez (LH) and Angelea Moore (CL) have just a couple more months until the winter storms drive them out of the high country and they are forced to trek south to more hospitable working environments such as Vail, Colorado. Will and Gianna are finishing up their second season at Jackson Lake Lodge in the Grand Tetons National Park and they couldn't be happier with their working environments. Chef Corle was able to catch up with Will and Gianna at their resort while he was on vacation this past summer. During dinner the two aspiring chefs kept saying "Can you believe that we work in such a beautiful place?" The picture below shows what guests get to look at while they are dining. Will and Gianna are planning to head back to Vail, Colorado to do another season in this upscale skiing town. It would seem that Will and Gianna are looking to stay out west for the foreseeable future.

Angelea Moore is close to completing her first season at Glacier Park in Montana and she recently reached out to Chef Corle to say "I'm currently working on the hot line in our restaurant as a cook 1. When I first got here, I started as a cook 2, doing garde manger work, I got promoted after my second week and my pay is much better than when I started! My job at first was challenging and working night shifts is a stress but a good one (we are very busy). I am absolutely loving this lifestyle and I don't want it to end! I've done so many amazing things like hiking up mountains and jumping from cliffs into waterfalls. This is an incredible experience so far. I'm already looking for my next job. I've applied to Steamboat in CO also, Taos, NM. I'm hoping to learn how to ski this winter. I think this is the best decision I could have made and I'm super grateful for the opportunity that CTC offers!"

We are so proud of what our alumni are accomplishing and experiencing, and we hope to have more updates on our other students that are spread across the country.
